

2024 IJRS JOURNEY REPORT

Reinforcing the Foundation to Strengthen Policy Reform and Good Governance Based on People-Centered Justice

FOREWORDChairperson of the
IJRS Association
2021–2024

With deep gratitude, I extend my sincere appreciation to all members of the association, staff members, research fellows, strategic partners, and stakeholders who have continuously supported the work of the Indonesia Judicial Research Society (IJRS). This annual report not only reflects the collective achievements IJRS has accomplished, but also illustrates our ongoing commitment to the organization's vision: a just and rational justice system and legal policy. This vision is pursued through three institutional missions: conducting trusted and high-quality legal and social research based on evidence, supporting stakeholders in addressing strategic legal issues, and empowering communities in the interest of society and the advancement of knowledge in the legal and social fields.

Amidst increasingly complex legal and social dynamics, IJRS, now in its sixth year, has maintained its consistency in producing evidence-based work, impactful policy advocacy, and the strengthening of access to justice—especially for vulnerable groups. Throughout the year, IJRS has collaborated with various institutions, including government ministries and agencies, national and international donors, the judiciary, universities, media, and civil society organizations.

These collaborations have resulted in tangible achievements across priority areas. In criminal procedural law reform, IJRS has contributed to the drafting of the Government Regulation in Lieu of Law (RPP) on the new Criminal Code (KUHP) 2023, the Supreme Court Regulation (PERMA) on terrorism sentencing, and a study on the cost of crime in drug-related cases. In institutional governance, IJRS has supported the development of a prosecutorial human resources system, the drafting of the 2025–2029 National Medium-Term Development Plan (RPJMN), and the measurement of the Legal and Human Rights Development Index.

In the area of vulnerable group protection, IJRS has developed the KataHukum.id platform as a legal information portal, facilitated advocate training in handling sexual violence cases, and conducted studies on sentencing disparities in sexual violence cases. The portal was launched during a mini-festival titled SHElebrate x KataHukum.id as part of the 16 Days of Activism Against Gender-Based Violence campaign. This event served as a significant moment for IJRS to raise public awareness, particularly among millennials and Gen Z, about women’s legal rights. IJRS has also been active in the 18+ Coalition for ending child marriage and in advocating for stronger victim assistance funds.

Furthermore, recognizing the importance of civil and commercial legal aspects, IJRS has also promoted civil procedural reform through public seminars and efforts to modernize civil procedure frameworks in the business sector. These initiatives underscore the importance of adapting civil law to the needs of an evolving economy and legal practice—particularly for advocates and state-owned enterprises.

Beyond programmatic achievements, IJRS has continued to strengthen its institutional governance, including branding, financial management, and personnel capacity development. We believe that a strong and sustainable institution is built on a solid foundation of internal governance. The Board of the Association remains committed to guiding IJRS as an adaptive, progressive, and responsive research institution attuned to emerging legal and social issues. IJRS’s strategic direction focuses on institutional capacity-building, resource diversification, and expanding impact through relevant and evidence-based research across broader issues.

IJRS continues to position itself as an independent research actor bridging the gap between public policy needs and the voice of civil society. In responding to evolving socio-political dynamics, IJRS aims to remain critical yet constructive in generating knowledge that drives systemic change. We firmly believe the future of the institution depends on its ability to remain open to change while holding steadfast to the founding principles upon which it was built.

This year also marks a key leadership transition at the executive level, in line with our commitment to cadre development and generational regeneration. In July 2024, IJRS officially appointed a new Executive Director, Arsa Ilmi Budiarti, for the 2024–2029 period, succeeding the previous Executive Director, Dio Ashar Wicaksana. This transition strengthens IJRS's organizational structure to respond to the institution's evolving needs. Furthermore, 2024 marks the end of the 2021–2024 IJRS Association Board term. As outlined in the IJRS Articles of Association, all appointments will end on 31 December 2024. Members of the association will be reappointed for the next term. Some existing members will continue, while others will be replaced, based on the institution's needs. This process is essential to ensure sustainable, democratic, and accountable governance in line with IJRS's long-term vision.

On behalf of the IJRS Association Board 2021–2024, I express my deepest gratitude to everyone who has supported IJRS's journey. May this report serve as a meaningful record and a strong foundation for the next generation in building a legal system that is just, transparent, and in service of the public interest.

Warm regards,

Nisa Istiani
Chairperson of the IJRS Association 2021–2024

FOREWORD

Executive Director of IJRS 2024–2029

In July 2024, I was entrusted with the mandate to lead the Indonesia Judicial Research Society (IJRS) as Executive Director for the 2024–2029 term. I accepted this responsibility with full awareness—not merely as an administrative or managerial role, but as a moral and intellectual mandate to ensure that IJRS continues to be an independent, progressive, and impactful legal research institution for the advancement of Indonesia’s legal system.

The next five years will be a pivotal period in shaping the direction of national legal reform. We are undergoing a significant transitional phase marked by the implementation of the new Criminal Code (KUHP), the ongoing revision of the Criminal Procedure Code (KUHP), the enforcement of the Law on Sexual Violence (UU TPKS), and broader shifts in global legal and political landscapes. In this context, IJRS plays a balancing role—not only by providing evidence-based support for policymaking and evaluation, but also by proposing innovative approaches to address the complexity of legal issues at both national and local levels.

We believe that the complexity of today’s legal challenges cannot be addressed with a siloed or sectoral approach. That is why interdisciplinary perspectives form a central pillar of IJRS’s work going forward—integrating social, economic, gender, environmental, and technological lenses into our legal analysis and policy recommendations. Through this, we aim to produce more comprehensive, relevant, and responsive insights for the benefit of society.

Building on the leadership that came before, IJRS remains committed to strengthening principles of accountability, transparency, and inclusivity throughout all areas of work. We continue to enhance our internal systems—from the development of standard operating procedures and professional development to mainstreaming diversity and gender equality across the organization. These are not merely institutional obligations, but fundamental values that shape how we work with communities, policymakers, and development partners.

This leadership transition has also served as a moment to consolidate IJRS institutionally—from human resource governance and communications strategies to program planning and digital infrastructure. We recognize that sustainability can only be achieved through continual system renewal, team regeneration, and ongoing capacity building.

Over the next five years, our strategic focus will center on four key areas: (1) promoting fair and effective criminal justice reform, (2) expanding access to justice, particularly for vulnerable and marginalized groups, (3) advancing institutional legal governance that is transparent, accountable, and inclusive, and (4) cultivating a collaborative and sustainable legal knowledge ecosystem. Amidst shifting political dynamics and funding challenges, we remain confident that our networks, commitment to evidence-based change, and innovative policy approaches will serve as the foundation for systemic transformation.

As part of the civil society movement, we understand that justice reform cannot be achieved alone. Therefore, IJRS will continue strengthening collaboration with a wide range of actors—from public sector institutions and academia to private entities and grassroots communities. We are particularly committed to expanding our partnerships with international allies, including universities, research institutes, and global development organizations. Through these connections, we hope to foster knowledge exchange, enrich research methodologies, and contextualize global best practices for Indonesia’s legal landscape.

In closing, I extend my deepest appreciation to IJRS’s founders, Advisory and Management Boards, staff, partner organizations, donors, and everyone who has walked alongside us. This mandate is not only about leading an institution—it is about carrying forward the hope for a more people-centered, rational, and justice-oriented legal future for Indonesia.

Sincerely,

Arsa Ilmi Budiarti
Executive Director of IJRS 2024–2029

Access to comprehensive and digestible legal information still poses a challenge for many Indonesian people, notwithstanding that proper legal understanding serves as a key element in reinforcing legal culture. Legal understanding covers many aspects, namely awareness, compliance, and public involvement in a just legal system. The existence of transparent and publicly accessible legal information not only functions as an initial step in realizing a more inclusive access to justice, but also plays a vital role in raising legal awareness in the society. In response to the legal culture reinforcement, in 2024, IJRS presented a legal data and information portal called KataHukum.id. KataHukum.id was officially introduced in the commemoration of 16 Days of Anti-Violence Against Women (16 Hari Anti Kekerasan Terhadap Perempuan – 16 HAKTP) in an event named SHElebrate x KataHukum.id which was held on 22-23 November 2024 at HeArt Space 2.0, Jakarta.

Katahukum.id was designed to act as a source of data and information for the society to acquire legal knowledge. Katahukum.id constitutes part of legal culture reinforcement by ensuring legal information to be accessible and digestible by all persons. In addition, we also continue rolling out communication strategies via social media to create legal culture reinforcement.

Although KataHukum.id has manifested in the form of a legal data and information portal, the existence of social media still holds a crucial role as a means to disseminate information in a broader scope, faster, and more interactive. Social media enables legal information to reach more people, raise massive legal awareness and open a more dynamic and inclusive discussion space.

We have various communication media platforms, including:

Through our existence on those various platforms, we attempt to maintain social media communication strategies that have been proven to work best and other aspects that need to be improved to deliver more relevant legal knowledge to the society. We have also created a special social media platform by introducing KataHukum.id and providing legal education through the QnA (Question and Answer) feature on KataHukum.id, namely:

@katahukum.id

KataHukum.id

Despite the fact that growing legal culture requires a long-term process, we are still committed to kickstart that notion through the information portal and social media. We expect the integration between the information portal and social media may become an effective strategy to reinforce legal culture.

KataHukum.id

With hardly any access to legal information in the society as the backdrop, IJRS attempted to present a legal information portal platform that provides information in digestible and accessible format to the society. Hence, IJRS initiated the KataHukum.id portal which was officially introduced on the commemoration of 16 Days of Anti-Violence Against Women (16 Hari Anti Kekerasan Terhadap Perempuan – 16 HAKTP) in an event named SHElebrate x KataHukum.id on 22-23 November 2024 at HeArt Space 2.0, Jakarta. KataHukum.id is also collectively used and managed by other civil society organizations. Currently, we collaborate with PEKKA, Association of LBH APIK Indonesia, Rumah KitaB, ICJ Makassar, Sapda Jogja and LBH Masyarakat.

SHElebrate X KatahuKum.id 2024, which became the launching event of KataHukum.id, adopted the theme of “Raising Awareness and Improving Collaboration to Celebrate Women’s Rights”. This event was packaged by combining discussions that share various perspectives on protection and handling women suffering from violence and an exhibition of art pieces expressing resistance advocacy messages for women in gaining access to justice. SHElebrate X KatahuKum.id was undoubtedly realized through partnership with various parties, namely supports from 30+ partners, collaboration with 10 artists, and 10+ volunteers, resulting in this event to be successfully organized and attended by more than 200 participants who were actively involved in various sessions. In two days of the event, more than 350 searches queried on the KataHukum.

id platform. This effort is expected to empower the public to be more familiar with legal data and information portals.

Social Media

Social media still becomes one of effective and interactive communication strategies to broadly and quickly disseminate information. Within minutes, the message published may reach larger scope of social media users, enabling the distribution of legal information to be more efficient. Various interactive features are available, such as Direct Message (DM), comment, and Q&A feature on Instagram Story, giving a space for social media users to actively engage, discuss, and receive in-depth understanding. As part of efforts to reinforce the legal culture, we have optimized social media as an educational means, and measured the rate of engagement and interest of social media users in various educational contents that we disseminate.

Sentencing Disparity in Sexual Violence Offenses

Sentencing disparity in Indonesia occurs when two persons committing a similar offense, but convicted with different sentences. Even though not all disparity is considered improper, an issue appears if the sentencing disparity is very far off, frequently triggered by biases or prejudices from judges. We reviewed rape and assault cases against minors and adults in District Courts and Military Courts from 2019 up to 2021, using quantitative and legal normative approaches. The result unveils that irrelevant factors often affect decisions of judges and lead to unwarranted disparity. In the launching of this research, we collaborated with The Conversation media to reformat our research output into a brief article and an explainer video to make findings in this research understandable by all members of society. From various contents both produced independently and collaboratively on the issue of sentencing disparity in sexual violence offenses, including media releases, articles, infographics, carousel contents, and explainer videos, those generated engagement of

Civil Society Coalition for Open Government Indonesia

On 14 February 2024, Indonesia organized a General Election (Pemilihan Umum – Pemilu), with one of the agenda was to elect the President and Vice President. However, during the campaign, the issue of Indonesian open government still had not become the public center of attention. The commitment to implement Indonesian open government should be an important agenda to be carried out by the current government and carried over by the future government. Moreover, this commitment is necessary to safeguard government transparency principles to continue to be transparent, participating, accountable, inclusive, and innovative. The Civil Society Coalition for Open Government Indonesia consists of 18 (eighteen) Civil Society Organizations, including us, that expresses our concerns on open government by adopting approaches in the form of public discussions and media releases. IJRS Instagram account is one of primary social media platforms used by IJRS to disseminate information and as an educational means. The main target of IJRS Instagram account is the young generation, namely Millennial Generation and Generation Z. This context may be extracted from the age demography of followers of the IJRS Instagram account that is mostly dominated by the age group of 25-34 years old at 49.4%.

May and July were months with the highest engagement rates. In May, we had a quite significant momentum, namely the transition of leadership with the election of the new executive director. In July, with a 0.1% higher engagement rate compared to May, we held two events which attracted wide attention, namely Dissemination of IJRS Publication: Criminal Procedural Law Reform After the Enactment of the 2023 KUHP & Assessment of Enforcement of Guideline of the Prosecutor’s Office on Handling Narcotics Cases. By observing those data, the highest engagement rate achieved when important information and momentum occurred. We had ever conducted a survey to our social media users, and one of the results shows that our social media users prefer to interact more with contents addressing crucial topics. Perhaps, this becomes one of factors that boosted our engagement rates in May and July.

For the past years, Tiktok has become one of social media platforms we are focusing on. Differs from other IJRS social media, we attempt to wrap IJRS Tiktok contents in more light and fun manners. Besides, we also modify those contents by riding on the current trends. We follow the trends to be closer to and more acceptable by our targeted social media users, namely the Gen Z. Hence, we published contents revolving around work culture, activities, and our daily lives as NGO workers, wrapped in a playful mood. IJRS Tiktok contents feature our own talents, including our researchers, admin-finance staff, and knowledge management staff who are relatively young.

The focus to develop this platform pushes us to be committed in routinely producing informative and exciting contents.
